

HAPPY NEW YEAR

... it is midnight, and the toll of the bells announce a brand New Year. It is time to begin again. God hands us 365 clean, new days and as we accept his proffer we must make valid resolutions to discharge all the responsibilities that automatically come with them. Our world is confused.
Seeds of destruction are planted everywhere. It is not a time for indecision. May we resolve, right now, to get a clearer view of destiny ...
to understand more of the meaning and purpose of life. May we have more time for God, and somehow, may He make us realize, He is in front of all our tomorrows.
Happy New Year!

COME BEFORE HIS PRESENCE WITH SINGING

Miss O'Hara Has Started New Career

BY PHYLLIS BATTELLE

NEW YORK — Maureen O'Hara—the only woman in town whose face can stand out between the faint distractions of vivid red hair and a creamy milk complexion—is beginning a new career. At least the public thinks it's a new career. Big-time singing. Like in a Broadway musical.

"You know, I cannot understand why people are so surprised," Maureen said, unwrapping the milk and the delicious Irish brogue. "I've been singing since I was a child. My mother was an opera singer. I've sung in every third or fourth picture I've ever made. I've had a voice coach nearly all my life."

"And yet now everybody stops and says, 'Listen, did you hear? O'Hara's going to sing!'"

The actress, who is scheduled to begin rehearsals in February for her first Broadway musical, "Christine," (book by Pearl Buck, music by Sammy Fain and Paul Francis Webster) added, "Further, I've been singing since I was a child. My mother was an opera singer. I've sung in every third or fourth picture I've ever made. I've had a voice coach nearly all my life."

"Of course, I must admit that if I were Rodgers & Hammerstein, and somebody said 'Who do you want to play the lead in your movie, Deborah Kerr or the pirate queen?' I'd have done exactly just what was done."

Miss O'Hara has what seems to be an innate Irish ability to kid herself. Like referring to herself as "the pirate queen."

"What else was I in so many pictures? Pinned back against a wall, clutching for a knife in my shirt." She shrugged, laughed.

"But look here, Ronald Colman once told me if he only got one great role every 15 years, it was enough. And I'm not ashamed to admit I've had some—what shall I say—roles of negligible stature? I have had little gems, to be sure, and there along the way, like 'The Quiet Man' and 'How Green Was My Valley' and some others."

"I sang in those movies, by the way," she frowned prettily. "But the singing just progressed the story, rather than making people distracted. I guess I should be flattered nobody remembers the songs."

Maureen has no fears about going on the Broadway stage for the first time. "Who I was raised in the theatre. I did all my school homework sitting on a three-legged stool in the wings listening to my mother sing or my brother direct plays. I was a member of the Abbey Theatre when Charles Laventure wanted me to do a film with him—I was only 16, but I'd already had years of theatrical experience. So I've yearned to go back on the stage so much these many Hollywood years."

"This is just a reversion to my beginnings, really. And singing? That comes so naturally that, my goodness if the day came when I couldn't sing—at least for my own pleasure—I'd just die."

Miss Maureen is in New York to rehearse for her dramatic debut in television. She will play "Mrs. Miniver" in a 90-minute "Special Tonight" show Jan. 7. Then she goes into consultation on "Christine."

"I guess," she said, "I'll sound Christmas in and around a hotel room. But that's all right. We all celebrated Christmas together last week in Hollywood, the presents and the family are all beautiful and accounted for." Maureen's family, all of whom followed her to Hollywood from Dublin, include mother and father, two brothers, three sisters and numerous nieces and nephews. And most important to Maureen, her daughter, who is beautiful and talented and 13.

"Just 13, though," suggested Miss O'Hara statistically.

BIG OLD TREE—This giant Baobab tree is thought to be more than 2,000 years old. It stands on the property of P. S. Vosloo in Tshipise, Union of South Africa. Sixty-five feet in circumference, the trunk is scarred with initials hacked by sight-seers. The Baobab tree is a valuable source of lumber, bears an edible fruit called monkey bread, and its bark and leaves are used in medicine.

BUT FRIENDLY—This pony, one of a herd of 300 that roams Sable Island off Nova Scotia, has become tame enough to be petted. He has been trained for patrol work to aid the two dozen technicians who man the weather station on the lonely dot of land. The origin of the ponies is obscure but legend says they are the survivors of a 15th-century French settlement.

BLIND DATE—PRESIDENT EISENHOWER KEPT A BLIND date with 7-year-old Rosa Maria Jimenez Salvo in Madrid, Spain, that made him late for breakfast with Generalissimo Francisco Franco. The little Spanish girl planted a kiss smack on the President's lips in a burst of affection, causing him to blush noticeably. It all began back in September when Rosa wrote to President "Esinyaguer"—which is how his name sounded to her—and asked to see him when he visited Spain. U. S. Ambassador John Davis Lodge arranged the meeting. — NEA Radiophoto

Federal Court Clerk Killed in Wreck

WINSLOW, Ark. (AP)—William S. Wellshear, who was federal court clerk at Fort Smith for 33 years, and his wife were killed when their automobile plunged 150 feet into a ravine near this north-west Arkansas town Saturday night.

They were riding on fog-shrouded U. S. Highway 71 when the accident occurred.

Wellshear was U. S. court clerk for the Western District of Arkansas with headquarters at Fort Smith from 1906 until his retirement in 1941.

He was 55. Mrs. Wellshear was 52.

The Wellshears had lived at Most Landing since 1943.

Wellshear was an attorney and a member of the Southern Circuit Bar Association for more than 20 years.

A court record will be at the state law library in Little Rock today.

It is expected the family of next of kin will be notified by the state.

Wilson Plant

The order signed by Judge John Cahill prohibited more than four union pickets at any plant entrance or more than three persons congregating outside the gates.

The union's Local 6 appeared to be taking care not to allow more than four pickets at the plant's main gate.

The weapons were found as officers searched every car going through the plant gate.

A Wilson spokesman said the plant would concentrate on butchering hogs today, with further processing scheduled for Tuesday. No cattle or sheep were on hand.

Gov. Orville L. Freeman proclaimed martial law Dec. 11 after two days of rock-throwing violence directed at the nonunion workers Wilson had hired to replace the strikers. Freeman acted after city and county officers said they couldn't cope with the situation.

The National Guard moved in, and the plant was closed. Wilson appealed to the federal courts. A three-judge panel ruled last Wednesday that Freeman had exceeded his authority. Subsequently, the governor lifted martial law and turned over the 73 Guardsmen on duty to local authorities, effective at midnight.

The guard commander, Maj. Gen. Richard Cook, was appointed an assistant police chief and a deputy sheriff.

Ralph Heistein, president of the UPWA, said that in the contract talks in Chicago last week, the company refused to state its position on major issues.

Main issue in the long dispute has been overtime. Wilson ended negotiations over a new contract Oct. 29 when 225 workers refused to work a nine-hour day, claiming this a violation of the contract. Management accused them of taking part in a sitdown strike and ordered them out of the plant. The talks in Chicago resumed Dec. 17.

Eisenhower's three-man fact finding board scheduled separate hearings with the union and industry negotiating teams. The fact finders also scheduled an afternoon session at which the companies were to make their "last offer."

This offer will be submitted to a secret ballot of the 500,000 steel-

Steel firms across the country.

President David J. McDonald of the USW indicated this might be the last try for company-by-company settlements by which he had hoped to crack the steel industry's solid front.

Accidents on Farm Take a Heavy Toll

Each year more than 14,000 farm residents lose their lives as the result of accidents, says Calvin Caldwell, County Agent.

A large per cent of farm accidents occur in using tractors and farm machinery carelessly. Tests show that an operator has less than 1.36 seconds for action after the tractor starts to tip before it goes over backwards. The average reaction time is about 0.4 of a second. You would have to disengage the clutch in seven-tenths of a second to prevent the tractor from tipping over backwards. A careless operator can upset any tractor.

Experience has proven that accident prevention always pays in fewer accidents and deaths. Mr. Caldwell gives a few simple rules to follow in preventing machinery accidents.

The 17 safety rules approved by the National Safety Council for the operation of tractors are as follows:

1. Be sure the gear shift is in neutral before cranking the engine.

2. Always engage the clutch gently, especially when going up a hill or pulling out of a ditch.

3. When driving on highways, or to and from fields, be sure that both wheels are braked simultaneously when making an emergency stop.

4. Always ride on seat or stand on platform of tractor. Never ride on drawbar of tractor or drawn implement.

5. When tractor is hitched to a stump or heavy load, always hitch to drawbar and never take up the slack of chain with a jerk.

6. Be extra careful when working on hillsides. Watch out for holes or ditches into which a wheel may drop and cause tractor to overturn.

7. Always keep tractor in gear when going down steep hills or grades.

8. Always drive tractor at speed slow enough to insure safety, especially over rough ground or near ditches.

9. Reduce speed before making a turn or applying brakes. The hazard of overturning the tractor increases four times when speed is doubled.

10. Always stop power take-off before dismounting from tractor.

11. Never dismount from tractor when in motion. Wait until it stops.

12. Never permit persons other than the driver to ride on tractor when it is in operation.

13. Never stand between tractor and drawn implement when hitching. Use an iron hook to handle drawbar.

14. Do not put on or remove belt from belt pulley while the pulley is in motion.

15. Should motor overheat, be careful when refilling radiator.

16. Never refuel tractor while motor is running or extremely hot.

17. When tractor is attached to a power implement be sure that all power line shielding is in the proper place.

Miller Quits as Federal Court Clerk

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—H. Grady Miller is quitting as federal court clerk for the Eastern District of Arkansas, effective Thursday, it was announced today.

He will have served for 21 years. There had been speculation for some time that Miller, a brother-in-law of the late Senator Joe T. Robinson (D-Ark.), would be replaced now that the federal judge ship situation in the state has been settled.

Nothing was said today about a successor to Miller.

A formal announcement, issued by U. S. District Judge J. Smith Henley, disclosed the impending retirement.

The statement said: "Mr. Miller has completed a long and successful tenure as clerk of the district court. In departing he carries with him the thanks of the court for his past service and best wishes for a long and happy private life."

Mr. Miller was scheduled to retire last summer, but because of the then-existing vacancies in permanent judgeships, he was asked by Judge Henley to continue as clerk until the end of this year.

Miller now is in Florida on vacation.

The retiring clerk was appointed by U. S. District Judge Thomas C. Trimble, now retired.

Miller, a Democrat, succeeded the late Sid B. Redding in the patronage job.

As clerk, Miller has supervised the Little Rock court office, where most litigation is filed, and other federal court offices at Batesville, Helena and Jonesboro.

Miller was a member of the Arkansas Bar Association and the Arkansas Judicial Conference.

Miller was born in Little Rock, Ark., and graduated from the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

WORKING WIVES IN THE LABOR FORCE

WOMANPOWER—Farm wives are joining the nation's labor force at a faster rate than their small-town or city cousins (see Newschart above). So reports the U.S. Department of Agriculture, noting that the percentage of farm wives earning wages rose by about a third—from 17 to 24 per cent—between 1950 and 1958. For city and rural nonfarm wives, the increase was about one-fourth during the same period.

In the dining room the serving table was overlaid with red taffeta and white nylon net. The centerpiece was a red reindeer and a white sleigh holding red and white candy canes. Tiny flowers with lighted red centers encircled the table.

Mints, nuts, and other tidbits were on the table and the Christmas red punch was served by Mrs. E. J. McCabe and Mrs. Frank McLeary. While Mrs. Tom McLeary and Mrs. Dick Watkins served the egg nog. Officer Walks Away

From Crashed Plane

DODGE CENTER Minn. (AP) — An Air Force officer stationed at Arkansas walked away from the crash of his light plane and was hospitalized at nearby Rockledge yesterday.

Capt. Verne Lutz of Jacksonville suffered face cuts but was in satisfactory condition. The crash occurred during a rain and heavy fog. Lutz's plane, a Piper Cub, went down in a clump of trees just off a highway. He climbed out, walked to the road and hitchhiked to the hospital.

Lutz is an administrative officer in the 48th Bomb Wing at Little Rock Air Force Base. He was flying a plane. He had flown his wife and two young daughters to Memphis to visit relatives on a holiday leave.

Examples in Way Ike Has Changed

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's changed President Eisenhower? There's been a big change this past year in the tactics and attitude of this 68-year-old man who has just 13 months left in the presidency.

Some examples: His dealings with Congress; his greater role in foreign affairs; his new attitude toward personal diplomacy.

For most of his White House years he was mild with Congress. This year he used a bulldog. As late as last August he took a dim view of personal diplomacy by heads of state at summit meetings. Look what's happened since then.

He's met with Premier Nikita Khrushchev; will meet him at the summit in April; will go to Moscow next summer; has just finished a summit meeting in Paris; has journeyed to three continents; and now wants more summit meetings.

Why the change? It could be this simple: With his presidency drawing to a close he wants to extend himself to the utmost on both domestic and foreign fronts. His big push at home has been on less spending; abroad, it's peace.

Although the Democrats overwhelmingly control Congress, Eisenhower kept them meek by continually beating them over the head with the big-spending charge. They trotted along, as he directed.

Eisenhower could crown his double service as soldier and President by helping bring the world now not only had an opportunity into a new era of peace. This effort alone would be a plausible explanation for his activity in 1959.

But perhaps other forces were at work on him—forces which he himself may not have consciously realized—to give him a greater sense of freedom and mission and a greater sense of self-dependency.

Through most of his presidency he relied tremendously on two men—Sherman Adams, chief of his White House staff, and the late secretary of state, John Foster Dulles.

Adams, who quit 15 months ago, was Eisenhower's buffer in dealing with Congress. He was truly an assistant president, without the title. Dulles so completely dominated foreign affairs he overshadowed Eisenhower himself in this field.

Dulles never seemed to feel anything was done right unless he handled it personally. The proof is the record number of his journeys. In the background, at home, in the background, while Dulles did most of the work.

With Adams gone, Eisenhower became increasingly aggressive with Congress, although he avoided both belligerence and unpleasant personal dealings.

But the shadow of Dulles, who died in May, still hung over Eisenhower as late as August when he told friends he did not like the modern development of diplomacy—summit conferences.

He said he considered it a step backward for heads of state to spend their time on work that belongs to specialists, like foreign ministers.

He said he preferred the 19th century way of doing things when foreign ministers made the journey, held the conferences, and heads of state mostly stayed at home.

But that was before Khrushchev came here. Eisenhower suddenly seemed to realize that he managed to help bring the world into a new era of peace. This effort alone would be a plausible

Boat Explodes

Near 800,000 Gallons Gas

CRESCENT CITY, Calif. (AP) — For three hours it was tough and go in this north coast harbor town.

A tug boat exploded next to a barge loaded with 800,000 gallons of high octane gasoline.

When the peril ended Sunday, one man was missing and believed dead, another was burned. Four were pitched into the bay by the force of the morning blast.

The downtown district of Crescent City a community of 2,750 was evacuated. Fishing boats, tied up during the holidays, lifted anchor. Many carried local residents.

The blast had the force of an earthquake in the waterfront area. It was felt as far away as Brookings, Ore., 30 miles to the north.

The missing man was Gordon McCullen, 23, of Seattle, a deck hand on the tug Celilo. The vessel belonged to the Upper Columbia River Towing Co., Portland, Ore. and had just arrived from San Francisco with the gasoline-laden barge.

Hospitalized with burns was Lawrence Hanson, 31, of Port Townsend, Wash.

Hanson said gas from the 97-foot barge spilled and "was sucked into the engine room through a ventilator. The engine room filled with gasoline vapor."

"The diesel engines ran wild," a Coast Guard cutter pumped water on the tug while the entire Crescent City Fire Department—flames and flash fires about the could seize it and work on it.

The great evidence of the change in his thinking came Sunday in Paris when his press secretary, James Hagerly, told news men the President favors not only but several summit conferences with the Soviet Union.

DOROTHY DIX

Her Husband Ducks Responsibilities

Dear Dorothy Dix:

I am a married woman of 27 with two children, two years and 14 months. We live with my mother, father and two brothers. My husband refuses to take any responsibility for our support. I have to fight for everything I get. He grows if I go out while he is out all the time. Despite all this, my parents treat him with patience and kindness. He never talks of making a home for me. I told him to go, but he simply will not budge. Bills are piling up. What should I do? — Mrs. C. D.

Dear Mrs. C. D.: There are times when, whether we want it or not, fate forces us to take charge. This is one of those times for you. Tell your husband with firmness, not rancor, that he must either provide a home and living for you and the children or get out. Should he persist in his aimless, irresponsible, selfish course, go to the law. You have your parents and your children to consider, if he doesn't. Be realistic. Since he has shown himself to be an adolescent — not a man — treat him as such. Maybe he will grow up!

Dear Dorothy Dix:

Our father is a policeman. He says all boys drive recklessly. My sister, who is 14, and I, who am 15, aren't allowed to go on dates when the boy drives. Our father believes every article against teenagers. When we show him others written on our behalf, he dismisses them as trash. Please help us enlighten him. I hope you print this as it is our first attempt at writing. — Betty and Maxine.

Dear Betty and Maxine: Your father's attitude is understandable because he undoubtedly deals with highly volatile barge. It had been unloading gasoline into underground pipes which carry the fuel to tanks south of the city.

Many teenagers bent upon taking advantage straight to hell. The best way to convince him he is wrong is by your own good conduct. Let him get better acquainted with your boy friends. If they are the right sort, he'll be the first to admit he was mistaken. Policemen are pretty human. Incidentally, your first attempt at writing is fine. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for "Teen-age Code."

Dear Dorothy Dix:

A friend married at 15 and now, ten years later, has three lovely children. One night at a party she and a good looking man came in very drunk. I later saw them kissing and snuggling. Why did she not this way? How can her devoted husband solve this problem? — Desolate.

Dear Desolate: If you are just a friend, mind your own business but if, as I suspect, you are the "devoted husband," put up a fight. The future of your family is at stake! Get your wife back even if you have to drag her in — figuratively speaking — by the hair of her head. She probably sought excitement elsewhere because she didn't find enough at home.

Send your problem to DOROTHY DIX. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address her in care of this newspaper.

Twenty-three, count 'em, college basketball tournaments are carded for tonight with practically every top team in the country involved in the big ones.

Six tournaments got under way last Saturday, and the other 17 start tonight. They'll all wind up by the end of the week.

In Los Angeles, the final of the first annual Los Angeles Festival could wind up in a replay of last season's NCAA championship between California and West Virginia.

The Bears have won 22 games in a row, the longest winning streak among major schools. They run head-on into Illinois (5-0) in their first game. West Virginia (8-0), led by All America Jerry West, plays Stanford.

The other two openers, match Southern California against North western and UCLA against Michigan.

At Raleigh, N.C., the Dixie classic starts with Utah (8-0) favored to break a 10-year stranglehold by North Carolina schools. The Utes play Duke in the first round. Wake Forest tangles with Holy Cross. North Carolina State meets Dayton and North Carolina is matched against Minnesota in the other games.

Other major tournaments getting under way tonight include the All-College at Oklahoma City, the Blue Grass at Louisville, the Southwest Conference at Houston, the Hurricane Classic at Miami and the Motor City at Detroit.

In New York, they still are marvelling at Oscar Robertson's fantastic 47 points in Cincinnati's 98-56 rout of St. Bonaventure Saturday in the first round of the ECAC Holiday Festival.

Big O and Co. meet St. Joseph's of Philadelphia in the semifinal tonight — the same club they smothered, 123-79 earlier in the season.

St. Joseph's advanced with an 84-70 triumph over Manhattan. The other semifinalists are Iowa, which turned back St. John's (NY) 81-84, and New York University, 78-68 victor over Dartmouth.

Two finals are on tap for tonight. Wisconsin meets Canisius for the Queen City title at Buffalo, and Evansville plays Wittenburg for the Evansville (Ind.) Invitational championship.

Examination Waived in Benton Slaying

BENTON, Ark. (AP) — G. W. Shores waived preliminary hearing in Municipal Court today in connection with the "booby trap" slaying of another man.

Judge J. Purcell held him for Circuit Court under $2,000 bond, which Shores furnished.

John Alvin Farwell of near Benton was wounded fatally Dec. 20 by a shotgun charge. Officers said he was struck at Shores' rural home, where Shores had rigged up the weapon so it would be discharged by opening of a door.

Shores said he made the device because he had been bothered by intruders.

Baltimore Colts Lick Giants for Nat'l Pro Title

By JACK DAVIS

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — The Baltimore Colts, counted out of the race by many after three losses in their first seven games, are the world champions of professional football again today.

They clinched the title for the second straight year by staging an inspired 24-point fourth quarter Sunday to rout the Eastern Division champion New York Giants 31-16. Last year the Colts defeated the Giants in the playoff 23-17 in a sudden-death overtime period.

Colts quarterback Johnny Unitas, voted the pro football player of the year, proved to a capacity crowd of nearly 60,000 in Memorial Stadium and television in 44 states that he deserved the honor. He threw two touchdown passes and ran for a third. It was the 39th straight game he has thrown a scoring pass.

Still, it was the defense on both teams that shone.

During that wild last period, when Giant quarterback Charley Conerly was trying to get New York back in the ball game with long passes, the Colts secondarily picked off three interceptions.

Conerly had only four intercepted during the entire season.

"Their defense made all their points for them today, not the offense," said Giant coach Jim Lee Howell. "Both defenses were better than the offensive teams."

If there were a single crucial play for the Giants, Howell reasoned, it was in the third quarter when New York, on the Colts' 26, decided to go for a first down on a fourth-and-one situation. The Giants were leading 9-7 at the time.

Halfback Alex Webster tried to barrel through his right tackle spot, but the Colt line surged in on him en masse, and Baltimore took over the ball on downs.

"The team seemed to go down a bit after that," Howell said, "though they never stopped trying."

Baltimore coach Weeb Ewbank, a searing, satisfied soul, also credited that play with being an important one.

"I think holding them like that fired us up," he said.

That they were. Unitas and Lenny Moore were the key men in an 86-yard, 16-play drive that produced the Colts' touchdown early in the fourth quarter to put them ahead 14-9.

A Unitas to Moore pass and run play moved the ball to the New York 12. A few plays later the versatile Unitas rolled out to his right and scored from the four standing up. From then on the Colts were home free.

It was the same great Unitas-Moore combination that clicked for the first quarter touchdown that gave the Colts a 7-0 lead.

This score—on a 60-yard drive—came the first time the Colts had the ball. Unitas faked a handoff to Alan Ameche and then ran his own 40, faked the ball to Moore. Fleet Lenny took it on the New York 20 and sped all the way for the score.

McMath suffered the injury when a horse reared and bit him on the head and left arm, it was learned Saturday. A hospital spokesman said the wound would heal and be usable again but probably would be stiff.

Porkers Head for Florida, Gator Game

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The Southwest Conference's annual basketball preview—the pre-season tournament—hits the hardwoods today with Southern Methodist and the Texas Aggies sharing the favorites' spotlight.

Arkansas and Baylor, two teams expected to give the top contenders a run for their money, kick open the action at 2 p.m. at Rice Institute field house.

Southern Methodist, 5-2 for the season and victor over highly-regarded Georgia Tech, meets a sophomoreish Texas Tech team which has only four lettermen. This game is at 4 p.m.

A&M takes on the 1958 conference champion, Texas Christian, at 7:30 p.m., and Rice and Texas will close the first day's play at 9 p.m. Finals are scheduled for Wednesday night.

The Aggies and Frogs come in where the 1958 tourney left off. A&M beat TCU, 61-45, in that meet's finals, then fell behind in conference play when injuries hit its ranks. TCU took the title with a 12-2 record but lost all its starters.

Sharp-shooting Texas is the dark-horse. The Longhorns have peppered the basket for an 86-point game scoring average—the league's best—in winning five and losing two pre-season games.

But Rice, 3-4 for the year, and even with the Longhorns in the odds books by virtue of their home court advantage.

The Aggies are solid 12-point favorites over Texas Christian, and critics figure SMU a 13-point choice over Tech's young Raiders. Arkansas and Baylor are quoted as even.

West Allies Are Still Far From Unified

By ARTHUR GAVSHON

PARIS (AP)—In the wake of the Western summit and NATO talks in Paris, the major Western Allies are still far from unified on four major issues they must negotiate with the Soviet Union.

Disunity continues over the military policy of the Atlantic Alliance itself.

The Western Big Four set a pattern for negotiation with the Soviets that might go on for years. But their decision is clearly only the beginning of a beginning.

President Eisenhower, French Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer either failed—or did not even try—to resolve their own differences on basic issues they intend to discuss with Nikita Khrushchev.

Instead they ordered their experts to go to work on building a common front for the proposed April 27 encounter with the Soviet Premier. Leading diplomats confidently explain the experts have four months to resolve the conflicts. But it took them 13 months of dickering to get together on the matter of holding the East-West summit meeting.

A balance sheet of the Paris exchanges, based on what high officials have disclosed shows:

Summit meetings after 1960: Eisenhower does not consider that the next U.S. administration need be bound by this Western proposal.

He, De Gaulle and Adenauer regard the suggested April meeting as largely a probing exercise. But Macmillan believes he has won the agreement of his partners to go on trying, even if the first session's results are slight.

A stopgap Berlin deal: Eisenhower—and Macmillan consider—although they do not say so out loud—that this offers the best chance of a firm agreement at the summit. They are ready to renew an offer the West made in the 1958 Geneva foreign ministers conference, which included a ceiling on armed forces in the divided city and a ban on hostile propaganda.

De Gaulle and Adenauer disagree. They argue that if Khrushchev really wants an end to the cold war, he won't dare revive the Berlin crisis.

Disarm: Eisenhower, Macmillan and, to a lesser extent, De Gaulle believe this could be a fruitful field of negotiation over a long period. Adenauer does not rate the chance of success too high. There is no agreement on the program to offer Khrushchev.

East-West relations: Allied experts still have to agree on what the four Western government chiefs meant in offering this blanket item for summit discussion. Strictly speaking, it might allow raising the matter of Red China and other topics that could generate more heat than light.

Pork Cagers Meet Baylor in SW Meet

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks head for Jacksonville, Fla., today and their Gator Bowl game with Georgia Tech.

The Hogs, all in good physical condition, will form up at Fort Smith and board a chartered plane, then a stop will be made at Little Rock, to pick up more players and for a rousing pep rally send-off from fans.

Gov. Orval E. Faubus, mayors of Little Rock and North Little Rock and a band will greet the team.

Coch Frank Broyles will put his Porkers through a workout immediately upon arrival at Jacksonville this afternoon, and five more practice sessions will be held prior to Saturday's game.

"Offensively, Georgia Tech will offer us some tremendous problems," Broyles said. "They've got the size and agility to stop us, too, unless we're very good."

Broyles singled out All-American linebacker Maxie Baughan and ends Jack Rudolph and Gerald Burch as Yellow Jackets who could give the Hogs trouble.

The Razorback coach will be facing his old boss, Bobby Dodd, in the game. Broyles is a former assistant coach at Tech.

The Yellow Jackets reassembled yesterday at Atlanta. Besides a daily workout on home grounds through Wednesday, they will hold meetings to study Arkansas films and player assignments. Tech will go to Jacksonville Thursday.

Man Lied About Sniper Slaying

PAINESVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A polygraph expert said today Floyd E. Hargrove lied when he told police he had killed the husband of the woman he loved.

The statement came from Detective Sgt. Ralph Schaar of Shaker Heights, Ohio, who subjected the 34-year-old truck driver to a two-hour interrogation.

"Hargrove's story does not hold up under the lie detector," Schaar said. "He did not do it."

Hargrove Sunday night made a stenographic statement saying he was the sniper whose rifle shot on Christmas Eve killed Charles R. Clark, authorities reported.

But Lake County authorities were having trouble finding evidence to support Hargrove's account.

Hargrove, divorced father of five, was being held as a material witness in the slaying of the 35-year-old Clark.

years ago when he was in better shape financially. Two buttons were missing from the jacket at that time.

Relating this to Harris, he said, "Look, the same two buttons are missing."

matter of FACT

In 1653, a local Paris postal system, using stamps, was established by the French king. In 1680 in imitation of this, an enterprising London merchant started a penny post for the city and suburbs, with hundreds of receiving offices, hourly collections, 10 to 12 deliveries a day, in business centers and four to eight deliveries in the greater part of London. The government took it over as soon as it began to show a profit and continued the service until 1801.

CHAPTER XXIV

Letting the motor idle, the dark man pulled the truck to a slow stop and sat for a time in moody introspection. At the other side of the cab the blond man was silent, huddled between them. Davey could only be thankful he had managed not to be sick; there was no telling what they might have done to him. The dark man, nodding ahead, seemed to experience an abrupt lift of spirits. "That's the highway just up ahead there," he said. "After the grind in this road we're going to have to stop and cool the engine. There's a place at the junction. I can call into the office from there and tell them we got hung up. I'll tell them we had that same trouble with the brakes again. Just remember."

The blond man nodded, then glanced down, just perceptibly, toward Davey. "What about him?" "That's what I stopped for," Davey said. "The dark man brought out a roll of light card. Reaching across Davey, he handed it to the blond man. "Take him back to the van and tie him up." Davey could almost feel the weight of the dark man's gaze leave him as it lifted to the blond man. "You got some objection?" "No," the blond man said slowly.

Then the dark man laughed, and the sound exploded thunderously within the narrow confines of the cab. "So you're finally beginning to catch on, huh? But you're dying, ain't you, just dying to know what I'm going to do. You're just right out of your stupid, oriental mind, ain't you?" "Look Bill—"

"Now please," the dark man said with arch politeness. "Don't give me no rude interruptions. We're going to dump the load and go on back into town. Just like nothing ever happened."

"His folks might be there when we get there."

"You think so, huh? You actually think they're going to be sitting out there with their kid missing? You know where they're really going to be? They're going to be right where we left them, tearing up the town looking for him."

"But maybe somebody saw him get in."

"And didn't say nothing? Okay, suppose they did? Suppose his folks are sitting there when we pull up. We stop out front and we check the load for the turn. We gag the kid, we roll him up in a tarp. We put him under the pads. When they see he's missing, we turn the van inside out looking for him. And guess what we don't find a whole lot of?"

"But later, Bull, what about that? What about—?" Davey looked up just in time to glimpse the blond man nodding toward him. There was a silence, and Davey could not resist a compulsion to glance around at the dark man.

"Everybody figures he's somewhere back in the city, don't they? They figure that's where they're going to find him. Well, I figure they're going to find him there, too. So — if he was back there, and we were out here all day, that proves we don't know nothing about it."

As the blond man lifted him out of the cab and lowered him to the ground, Davey's frightened glance darted out quickly to the dry, uneven landscape beyond the road.

The blond man quickly took his hand. "Don't go nowhere," he said in a low, imperative voice. "Honest, kid, don't go nowhere. He's been drinking."

When they reached the back of the van, the dark man had already opened the door. As the blond man lifted Davey up inside, he retreated to the corner of the van and looked out along the road. Davey, moving back into the van, bumped against the cardboard wardrobe and slid away.

"Take it easy," the blond man murmured.

After tying Davey's hands behind his back he had him sit down on a heavy pad and tied his feet for a moment he seemed about to speak but instead he turned away to the open door. "Okay, Bull," he said. "All set."

The dark man appeared at the edge of the van.

"You just settle down there beside him."

The blond man's head snapped on sharply. "Huh—?" he said. "What for?"

"You can keep him quiet."

Before the blond man could speak again, the door slammed shut, and he and Davey were closed into darkness. Davey made out the quick, whispering rhythm of the blond man's frightened breath.

"Kid, listen, don't be scared. He ain't going to hurt you. He's crazy right now, see, he's kind of excited. But he'll pull out of it before — before he does anything. I've seen him before."

After Sam left the room, at the farmhouse, Selma refused to yield to the tears that pressed close behind her eyes. One thing she had learned these years was that tears never did any good.

Looking down at the table for something to keep herself busy, she caught sight of a small rectangle of leather at the far side of the table.

Crossing around the table, Selma picked up the wallet, marveling at the fine leather workmanship expended on something that was really no more than a toy.

Then she opened it and saw the identification card inside.

"Davey Cleaves," she whispered.

CHAPTER XXV

When Selma and Sam pulled up into the gravelled yard of the fore it seemed that Selma was to have her chance to make the call without any complications after all. Bert was out by the gasoline pump next to the highway, servicing a customer. A plump, florid little man with a friendly grin he stood beside a big white and blue moving van talking with lively animation to the driver in the cab.

Selma lifted her gaze to the cab and the driver. Her eyes widened with surprise. The man in the truck though she saw him only in profile, was the little boy's father, the same dark man who had come into her kitchen and carried the child away. Selma stood watching after it as Bert came toward her around the back of the truck.

Selma nodded toward the retreating van. "Where'd he come from, Bert?"

Bert laughed. "Why, I figure he come from heaven same as the rest of us."

Selma turned slightly, aware of Sam coming to join them from the other side of the truck. "Did he come in off the highway or off the road?"

"Why — off the highway, I guess," Bert said with a glance of surprise.

She crossed to the store and entered. Along the back wall there was a counter behind which stood long shelves stocked solidly with canned goods. Making her way toward the counter, Selma noted with a sinking heart that Sam and Bert had followed after her. Nervously she smiled at Olive, who, putting aside her fashion magazine, eased her long, too-thin body down from the high stool upon which she was sitting and came forward.

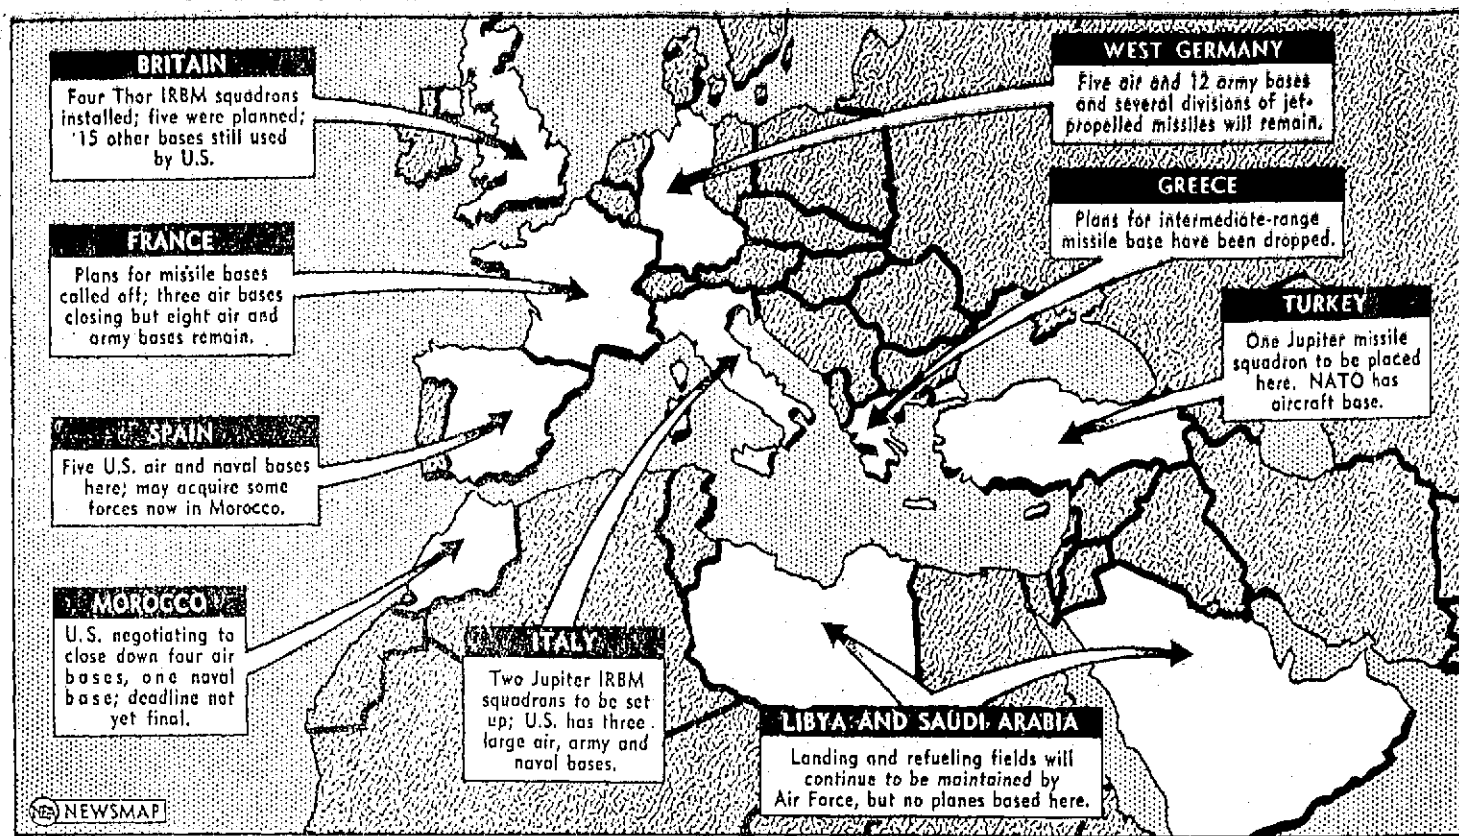

"Hi, Sel," Olive said with nasal amiability. "Good to see you. Isn't it turning nasty, though?"

Selma nodded. "We've had better. Opening her purse, she passed her hand over the smooth surface of the little wallet and took out the sheet of ruled note paper on which was written her shopping list.

Placing the list on the counter, she reached back into her bag and took out a small coin purse. She was going to need change to make the call and she didn't want to waste time getting it from Olive. Opening the purse, she was relieved to find that, besides a five-dollar bill and some pennies she had a quarter, four dimes and a nickel.

"Counting your pennies?" Olive asked.

Selma looked up smiling. "I'll

POWER SHUFFLE—Changes coming up during the next few months for U.S. bases in Europe, Africa and the Middle East are spotted on Newsmag above. The moves and cutbacks in bases and hardware are partly due to an attempt to reduce the U.S. military budget. Cost of maintaining arms abroad is estimated at 3.4 billion dollars a year. There are also some nationalist pressures, such as in Morocco. Some nations are hesitant about accepting American missiles on their soil. Another factor are changes in strategy as missiles replace aircraft and the ring of air bases lessens in importance.

WHEN THE BACKBONE BROKE—American steel production was climbing nicely out of the recession doldrums in 1959 when the steel strike broke in the major companies. If a million workers were idled and nearly all production was stopped for over 100 days. Mills rapidly got back into high gear soon after the Taft-Hartley 80-day injunction was invoked.

DETROIT'S DILEMMA—Heavy stockpiling kept the nation's auto makers from hitting the skids for a few months after the steel strike began. First big dip in 1959 in chart above reflects a slowdown due mainly to model turnovers. Second dip, caused by the steel shortage, hit soon after, resulting in extensive layoffs. Resumption of steel set things humming again.

be a great new day when I don't." She slid a furtive glance toward the end of the counter where the phone hung on the wall.

Olive picked up Selma's list from the counter, and retreating to the shelves, began to collect the items and bring them, a few at a time, back to the counter. Moving constantly back and forth, she kept up a running, babbling chatter.

Sam, noticing that Selma had turned in their direction, looked up.

"You women better get a move on," he said. "If there's a storm coming up we've got to get back to the birds."

Selma darted another glance toward the phone.

"We're just about through," she said. Then, pausing, she forced herself to go on. "What about the feed for the birds? We got enough to feed us through till next week."

The feed, she knew, was kept in a shed with an outside entrance at the rear of the store. If she could just worry Sam into thinking they needed another sack or two he and Bert would have to go outside to get it. She watched hopefully as Sam thought it over. "Didn't we put in extra last time?" he said. He turned to Bert. "Don't it seem that way to you?"

Bert shrugged. "What's extra? I don't know how hungry them birds get. I just sell the stuff."

"It won't hurt to be safe," Selma put in softly.

Sam nodded. "I guess it won't hurt. It's better to go to have some extra on hand."

"If you put it now," Selma said quickly, "I'll be through just about the same time."

Bert leaned forward and looked Sam lightly on the knee. "Come on Sam, you need a horse to call on you? Can't you see they want to talk to her in private?"

His eyes still on Selma, Sam nodded. With a reluctant glance he turned to the door. "You can go," he said. "I'll be right back."

He turned back and looked at Olive. "You can go," he said. "I'll be right back."

He turned back and looked at Olive. "You can go," he said. "I'll be right back."

matter of FACT

The baggage of the nomadic Australian Bushman—his entire wealth—weighs about 33 pounds. The husband carries some 21 pounds with him. His wife, because she may also be carrying a child, has a 12-pound load. The man's possessions consist of weapons to secure food. The woman carries kitchen utensils—something to hold water, a digging stick, and a roll of skins. She also has a netted bag for carrying odds and ends. Even a Bushwoman needs a purse.

Film History Is Littered With Mistakes

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Film history in the past decade is littered with mistakes that could have been avoided by a more industry.

Some of the mistakes were unavoidable. But many policy makers looking for the industry's mistakes were made out of ego or ignorance.

Some Nations Fear Decisions at Summit

By GEORGE McARTHUR

PARIS (AP)—Belgium, Greece and Turkey expressed fears today they may be affected by decisions taken at an East-West summit conference in which they had no part.

The three little nations—supported in part by Norway and Italy—spoke up at a closed session of the Atlantic Alliance's Ministerial Council.

The council gave full support to the Western Big Three proposal for summit talks with the Soviet Union but with a proviso for prior consultation among the allies.

Strong hints came from Moscow that Premier Nikita Khrushchev will accept the Western invitation to a summit session this spring with the United States, Britain and France.

U. S. Secretary of State Christian A. Herter and British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd took pains to reassure doubtful small nations.

Herter and Lloyd assured the other ministers that no nation's interests would be jeopardized behind its back. NATO officials emphasized that the issue did not develop to the point of acrimony.

Turkish Foreign Minister Fatih Rustu Zorlu expressed doubts the Soviet Union has the peaceful intentions it professes. This, he said, made firm consultation all round more than ever necessary.

Lloyd said that even on disarmament he did not visualize any final agreements would be made without full approval of any nation concerned. Sources said the allies appeared reassured by these pledges and the meeting closed harmoniously.

It was reported authoritatively that the United States considered the West's proposals for a series of summit conferences as mainly a psychological move in order not to raise false hopes.

The United States does not believe the proposal for a series of summit conferences in any way commits the West to more than the Paris meeting proposed for April. It was reported on high authority.

The test of whether any future summit meetings will be arranged will be the sincerity shown by Moscow at the first conference.

The Ministerial Council of NATO ended its annual policy review meeting after hearing a report from French Foreign Minister Maurice Couve de Murville on the weekend meeting of the Western Big Four.

The 15-nation council in a com-

In delivering the summations, the three Western ambassadors in Moscow told Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko the West wants wide-ranging negotiations unhampered by agenda.

Eisenhower, De Gaulle, Macmillan also visualize summit strictly as a Big fair without leaders from West Germany, Communist or even neutral India.
